Raising Funds and Raising Hell

If an observer of the university scene were sufficiently simple-minded, he would have every right to count a contribution to higher education -- St. Michael's College, for instance -- a subsidy for some of the more spectacular forms of vice. For what else do newspapers report? Surely not that 999 students have studied their Physics or Greek Prose so well that they have passed their exams when there is one who got drunk and assaulted a Constable, or better, was picked up smoking grass. (Local papers, out of deference for older readers, call this 'pot'.) No doubt the hard-pressed reporters and feature writers have their reasons in their readers. People like to be shocked a little, not too much, like to feel that things are worse than they used to be.

Still, there are other sides to student doings that the papers might find as worth noting as student disorders. Every summer for many a year now, an important number of St. Michael's students, with others from all over North America, go to Mexico to help the people and their priests: girls teach reading and health and household arts; boys have built buildings and piped in water; they all teach faith in a way that the best Catechism cannot match. Perhaps academic success is less exciting than hockey, but learning is what a university is for: 1968 is not the first year that St. Michael's 'designates' in the prestigious Woodrow Wilson competition number more than their proportion in the university would justify. Need we mention that you are not picked for a Woodrow Wilson fellowship because of what you smoke, for breaking the glasses of a Dow Chemical representative, for getting yourself arrested, no matter in how good a cause.

No one in his right mind would think everything perfect at St. Michael's. Like students, administrators and teaching staff have weaknesses to go with their strengths, and not all of these will be cured by more money. No harm to see all this in perspective: universities had their troubles in the 'ages of faith' that were not always 'ages of morals' -- professors were sometimes heretics, students often rioted, university statutes had to be drawn to keep ladies light on virtue out of college. No LSD, of course, but water was not the only thing they drank and the Queen's archers who kept order when Brother Thomas Aquinas gave his first lectures were the 13th century equivalent of so many Mounties, there to see that rancorous professors

"CAREER-IN"

On the evenings of January 17th and 18th, the Alumni Association, working with the Student Council, took over the Student Centre to present a "Career-In" designed to give students an opportunity to investigate various career possibilities, to meet actual practitioners in their areas of interest, and to ask informal questions.

Joe James (1 Law) with lawyers Peter Grossi, Dante DeMonte & Nick McRae

11 fields were represented: Accounting, Communications Media, Finance, Government service, Law, Librarianship, Management, Marketing, Medicine, Social Work and Teaching.

Each evening's program began at 7:30 p.m. in the Assembly Hall with opening remarks from Gerald Hollyer, Alumni Association President, after which the students dispersed to one of the eleven separate locations in the Centre to hear about the career of their choice. There was a break at 8:30 p.m. which allowed the students to circulate and attend a second session of another career. Altogether 35 alumni spoke to about 175 students.

Management panel: Jim Courtright, Coordinator of Public Relations, Shell Canada; David J. Roche Director of Operations, Canadian Breweries, Central Division & student Bob Shiley

To conclude the evenings, alumni and students, together with Fathers Kelly, Mallon and Elmer, gathered in the Assembly Hall for refreshments.

The second, continuing phase of the project will give students opportunities for individual meetings with alumni active in their fields of interest. On the College side, these interviews are being arranged through the Counselling Service of the Student Council. Luc Charest is in charge for the Alumni Association.

With the "Career-In", a dialogue has been begun between two of the major bodies that make up our College -- undergraduates and alumni. The students, on the one hand, were delighted -- and sometimes amazed -- to meet business people who really enjoy their jobs. "Fulfillment" and "stimulation" are much-used words around the campus these days. Many students think with some dismay of being trapped in what they imagine to be the deadly narrow routine of office work. Their finding, in the exchange of information, that the business world can indeed offer satisfaction to an intelligent man, was a step in dispelling this attitude. There were even some signs of a 'catching' of the alumni's interest and enthusiasm. Alumni, on the other hand, were pleased to have the opportunity to meet first-hand with today's students. For many of those who have been away for ten, fifteen or more years, the taste of 1968 university life awakened a new interest in the College.

It is hoped that with the dialogue begun at the "Career-In" the undergraduates, upon graduation, knowing at least some of the alumni personally, will begin to lend their youthful and vigorous support to the Alumni Association. It is also hoped that the alumni, through their contacts with the students, will be even more aware of the College as a dynamic force in the field of higher education.

(and the students for whom they were Pied Pipers) did not mob the unwelcome competition. What a loss for the world had the University of Paris been closed down as a bad job when all this happened in the mid-13th century!

When our students break one or another of the ten commandments, and we are never allowed to forget that they do, we might reflect that this is the risk God takes with them and it ill behooves any one else to complain about the odds. Wherever there is life there is risk. The least we can say of our students is that they are certainly alive and, if a generalization be permitted, more alive than were the students of their parents' time, which was also my time. They may not as yet be very good at answering all the thorny questions they raise, but they are far from marionettes, content to dangle at the ends of strings that other people twitch. Mrs. Grundy would not have liked them much, but neither would Herr Hitler have liked them any better.

If we read the Bible as devoutly as we read newspapers, we should see better that students, like every son of Adam, every daughter of Eve, need redemption. They are in a world that has a bad record: killing the prophets, carousing on the eve of deluge, brother murdering brother in a field. Most of that record is not yet theirs -- it is much more ours who arrived on the scene a generation earlier. No matter, they and we and all our forebears need salvation. St. Michael's is not exactly in the business of providing salvation, but it is a university situation that aspires to provide a community and an instruction, facilities for research and for teaching, that opens doors wide to faith and hope and charity. It is to these, and not to over-publicized vice, that contributions to our College go.

THE VARSITY FUND...THE EIGHTH YEAR

The telephones of Metro Toronto will commence to ring with Varsity Fund Telethon calls in March. This issue, therefore, provides a "made-to-measure" occasion to review the history of this activity, and to consider its objectives. For what is all too familiar, we apologize (but not too abjectly -- after all, we should constantly examine what we are doing, and a quick look back always helps).

The Varsity Fund is the University of Toronto's "annual alumni support program" involving the various alumni groups excepting Medicine and Trinity which both have separate programs. The Fund began in 1961, when 6,320 gifts totalling $103,200 were received. In 1967, 19,800 gifts totalling $336,500 were received. The fund-raising activity is by direct mail, with special activities such as the Telethon in Metro Toronto, and other urban areas, and the Committee of One Thousand to encourage gifts of $100 or more.

The simple purpose of the Varsity Fund is to provide the University with a major source of unrestricted funds...to provide what has been called "a margin of excellence".

President Bissell underscored the vital role of the Varsity Fund when he said,

"There are occasions, when a Varsity Fund grant covers the entire cost of an important new project we cannot finance from normal sources. More often it provides the flame that lights the fire -- the extra few dollars which make it possible to move into new areas of study.

"In other situations, by supplying technical aid or an item of equipment, the Varsity Fund will rescue a research project that is foundering for lack of money. The Fund has given us the wonderful gift of flexibility. We can rise to the unexpected and we can do the unexpected. Our gratitude goes to all who are helping to make this possible.

A new system of financing higher education has been introduced recently by the government. President Bissell explains the crucial effect this new plan will have on the university's educational program:

"The method of financing is known as formula financing. Expressed in simplest form, it is a method of determining a grant to a university on the basis of the number and variety of students. This method has many advantages. It tells us in advance what the approximate size of our grant will be. It enables us to work with complete freedom within the limit of the grant, and it eliminates the possibility of interference in details of the budget.

"But there is one advantage which outweighs all of the others. In calculating the total grant from the Province, the Province takes into consideration income from fees, but it does not take into consideration private gifts and benefactions. In other words, private money is free money which can be used by the University as it sees fit without fear that it is assuming obligations that the Province might take up. Every private dollar becomes with absolute assurance a 'plus' dollar.

"There is a second implication to this new method of financing which is of equal importance to all of us. The basic dollar unit on which formula financing rests is devised so as to take care of the average needs of the average University. This means that a complex university like Toronto, with its many responsibilities and new departures, cannot hope to cover all of its enterprises from government funds.

"Private giving thus becomes not only necessary, but crucial for the University of Toronto. We are a great centre of intellectual scholarship and study, and we could no more settle for an easy mediocrity than we could, say, for the demolition of the tower of University College.

"If I were asked to say in a few words what the Varsity Fund has done for the University of Toronto, I would say that it has made it a more attractive and a more intellectually exciting place."

St. Michael's College (like Victoria) is a federated university and, as such, has a special arrangement with the Varsity Fund by which contributions from SMC alumni are made available directly to the College. It is a well-known fact that these contributions are sorely needed, but not so well-known is the fact that the College could not have existed and expanded in the past except for the donated services of the Basilian Fathers and others. The proceeds from the Varsity Fund to the College during the past three years have been:

1965 - $ 17,878.25	from 826 gifts
1966 - $ 21,438.00	from 979 gifts
1967 - $ 22,329.54	from 1001 gifts

The average gift from St. Michael's alumni is over $22, which compares favourably with the University as a whole. Our percentage of participation, however, leaves much to be desired.

If you give regularly, stick with us, we need you, and thanks. If you haven't given before, please start with 1968, even in a small way.

Bob Armstrong

Bob Armstrong '51, is Past President of the Association and Division Director for St. Michael's for the 1968 Varsity Fund Campaign.

The figures given above are for gifts received in Canada. In addition, the U of T Associates in New York (the group to whom donations from U.S. alumni are directed) in 1967 provided $3,600 in the form of nine $400 scholarships for U.S. students entering St. Michael's.

Father John Kelly, President of St. Michael's College, has approved of the closing of the Centre of Ecumenical Studies at the end of the present academic year.

Father Gregory Baum opened the Centre in 1963. Its purpose was to promote ecumenical studies. At that time ecumenism was a new movement in the Church and it had as yet little influence on the academic life of the University and, in particular, on the way in which theology was being taught.

Today, five years later, the situation at the University has totally changed. Ecumenism has become part of university life. In particular the Graduate School of Theology of St. Michael's College has joined with the Protestant/Anglican Graduate School on the same campus to form a single Toronto Graduate School of Theological Studies. This means in practical terms that the courses given at this school are attended by Catholics, Anglicans, Protestants and that every professor, whatever his Church, will take into account the theological traditions of the Churches other than his own. The entire Graduate School, therefore, has become ecumenical.

The Centre of Ecumenical Studies has achieved its purpose. This is the reason why Father Gregory Baum has asked to close it at the end of this academic year. The publication The Ecumenist will continue to be published, but the editorship may soon pass to another ecumenical theologian.

Father G. Baum will continue to be professor of theology at St. Michael's College. For the last two years his interests have shifted from ecumenism and the problem of the Church to dialogue with non-believers and the problem of God. His courses have mainly dealt with what Catholics call "Fundamental Theology" and Protestants "Philosophy of Religion".

Ecumenism may even modify the structure of the Department of Religious Knowledge of the University. Plans have been made, and are now being discussed, to create a single Department of Religious Studies and to offer students an area of concentration in religion in their General Course. This has become possible because the various Departments of Religious Knowledge have learned to collaborate, and the Colleges permit their students to take religious studies wherever they choose. Here again ecumenism has had an effect.

The closing of the Centre of Ecumenical Studies, therefore, is not a sign that St. Michael's College is becoming less ecumenically oriented; on the contrary, it symbolizes that ecumenism has become a reality deeply integrated in the life of the College, promoted by the President, by the Graduate Faculty of Theology, by the Department of Religious Knowledge, as well as the student body.

Senate Elections

Every four years the graduates of the University of Toronto elect those who will represent them on the University Senate during the ensuing four years.

The graduates of St. Michael's elect three. Nomination procedure was outlined in the February issue of the University of Toronto News. If more than three St. Michael's nominations are made, election by ballot will proceed, with ballots to be mailed to all alumni by March 27, 1968, to be returned to the University Vice-President and Registrar by April 24, 1968. This is one way in which graduates can exercise "Alumni Power". With Bob Hicks, the President of the University of Toronto Alumni Association, we "urge Alumni to safeguard and maintain their rights in University affairs by exercising them wisely and with a sense of obligation." Please use your vote.

Student Awards

Perhaps no single area is as indicative of advances in higher education as that of Student Awards. Student Aid Programs represent profound changes in thinking in the last generation on the part of governments, on the part of universities, and on the part of society as a whole. These changes give expression to the conviction that a university education should not be the sole privilege of the economically better off. Scholarships recognize high academic merit which is usually a combination of talent and performance. Bursaries, Government Grants and Loans recognize not only need but the necessity of cultivating our first national resource, our young minds.

The growth in Student Aid Programs has necessitated a new division of the Registrar's Office, the Office of Student Awards, under the direction of Rev. H. P. Coughlin, C.S.B. At St. Michael's the number of applicants for various types of financial assistance has tripled over 1966-67. The Student Award Program may be divided into three categories:

(a) Scholarships and Prizes: These are granted on merit only and cover a wide range of courses, subjects and years. In the present academic year 302 St. Michael's students have won scholarships totalling $105,280. The sources of these funds may be summarized as follows:

St. Michael's College Foundation	$ 28,357
The Varsity Fund	14,396
The Varsity Associates	3,600
The C. L. Burton Trust	3,417
University of Toronto Scholarships	15,976
Ontario Government Scholarships	33,600
Others	5,903

(b) Bursaries: These are awarded primarily on the basis of need, although academic proficiency is also a factor. These bursaries are available to first year students on admission and also to students in the upper years as in-course awards.

In the academic year 1967-68, 103 students have been granted bursaries totalling $19,480 from the following sources:

The Atkinson Charitable Foundation	$ 3,200
The C. L. Burton Trust	2,806
The Labine Bursary	500
St. Michael's College Bursaries	1,350
University of Toronto	6,875
Others	4,748

(c) The Ontario Student Award Program (OSAP) is the principal source of financial aid to students. This program is administered by the Provincial Department of University Affairs through the University and College Awards Offices. Detailed applications are submitted by the students in which the family income, the number of dependent children and other pertinent factors must be listed. The student's financial needs are then assessed with regard to his course, living accommodation (in residence or at home), transportation costs and other essential items of expense. In the light of these factors an award is approved (if this is warranted) and comprises an interest-free loan from the Federal Government to be repaid after graduation, and a non-repayable grant from the Ontario Government. In the present year 720 St. Michael's students have received loans averaging $525 for a total of approximately $378,000. 680 students have received outright grants averaging $425, totalling about $290,000.

If the present trend continues, it may be anticipated that there will be another substantial increase in all three phases of the awards program during the coming year. The total disbursement through St. Michael's Awards Office will rise from the $800,000 distributed this year and may well approach the million dollar mark in 1968-69. If this startles the graduates, it is because Ontario is merely trying to catch up to what has been going on in North America for some years and is proof that education is the largest of all undertakings in society.

LIBRARY FOR
UNIVERSITY OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

JOHN J. FARRUGIA, ARCHITECT
3092 DANFORTH AVE

The Library will provide for a collection that will number 250,000 volumes in 15 years. It will have reading places for 40% of the student body and 20% of the faculty, just under a thousand chairs in all. The building is square in plan, 161 feet wide and 161 feet deep, four stories in height.

We gave the architect quite a challenge by asking him to provide as chief qualities of the building: simplicity of plan, flexibility of function, possibility for expansion, attractiveness of appearance, economy in construction, while sacrificing nothing to convenience or economy of operation.

The shape of the site and experience in other libraries suggested a modular form of construction based on a standard 'bay' and it was established here at 22 feet 8 inches square. This allows maximum use of space for book stacks or reading places. The fundamental unit of construction has become a leitmotif of the building's appearance and decor.

As you view the entrance on St. Joseph Street a cloistered forecourt made up of four of these modules can be seen. Broad glass doors open into a square lobby which will contain a commissioned work of art and other less permanent displays. Because the building is at grade level the first floor is generally wrapped around with a solid wall of rough-textured fluted concrete finish. There is a continuous horizontal band of light above this, on which the mass of the building seems to float. The exterior walls of this superstructure are precast concrete sections with a projecting 'cowl' defining the broad windows, five to a bay, of tinted glass with thin-blade venetian blinds between the panes.

Entering through a turnstile you may proceed immediately on your left to a reading room and to a special collections room and periodicals section; straight ahead is the catalogue and reference area. To the right is the circulation desk, display area for new books, a bank of two elevators, and main staircase. Staff offices are on the perimeter of this open floor.

Acoustic conditions, along with appearance, atmosphere, and even economy (when maintenance factors are included with the initial cost) have led us to carpet most of the library.

St. Michael's Annual Reunion Dinner for the Golden, Ruby and Silver T classes will be held on Friday, May 31. If your year was 1918, 1928 or 1943, watch for your personal invitation in the mail.

University of Toronto events for the Spring Reunion on June 1 include Bus Tours of the old and new campuses in the morning, lunch at Hart House, "Alumni College" in the afternoon in the West Hall of University College and, for the 50, 40 and 25 year classes, the traditional President's Garden Party at the Rosedale home of Dr. and Mrs. Bissell.

Of the 24 Woodrow Wilson Fellowships awarded to students at the University of Toronto this year, 7 were won by students of St. Michael's.

Professor Richard Schoeck of the English Department is on leave, having been awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for 1967-8, to complete a book on the early history of the Inns of Court. During his absence, the Acting Chairman of the Department is Professor David Dooley.

The Hon. John Turner, Federal Minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, will be the speaker at St. Michael's annual Graduation Banquet in Hart House March 12.

Dr. Jean Vanier again gave a series of lectures to students at St. Michael's during January and February this year. So great was the response that the lectures had to be moved from Carr Hall to the Auditorium of the new Student-Faculty Centre, and even there, with 500 seats, standees were lined against the walls. The theme was ON LOVE AND THE CONQUEST OF HUMAN MISERY.
